Art Unit: 1731

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Shimada et al (5,958,102) taken alone or in view of Powers (4,4726,827).

Shimada et al disclose the process of producing a glass particle perform comprising disposing a plurality of burners opposite to a rotating starting rod; relatively reciprocally moving the starting rod and the burners in a parallel axis; depositing glass particles synthesized by the burners on the surface of the starting rod wherein relative movement is stopped and restarted between positions that can be labeled as turn-back positions. Each of the points L1 and L6 depicted in Fig. 1 can be labeled as turn-back positions while each of the points L2, L3, L4 and L5 qualify as stopping and restarting points and are thus inclusive of the current claim language "relative movement is stopped and restarted". The instant claims do not require that the burners are stopped and then restarted in the same direction.

Art Unit: 1731

Shimada et al also disclose the step of monitoring to determine the level of deposition (Col. 3, line 51 ff), correcting for variations in outer diameter of deposit (Col. 5, lines 1-13), determination of number of burner units, distance between burners, effective length of perform (Col. 5, line 49 ff) and control of the deposition rate (Col. 6, line 29 ff). With these teachings, it would be well within the purview of one of ordinary skill in the art to determine parameters and features of the dependent claims.

In addition to the above rejection, the prior art is well aware of the effect of providing relative movement or a stationary (stopping position) during deposition of glass particles on a rotating bait rod. For example Powers discloses the effect on the level of deposition for reciprocating and stationary burners (See Col. 6, lines 23-37). It would have been obvious to provide a stopping point for the burners in the process Shimada et al in order to alter the level of deposition as taught by Powers.
